8. We have a cap on the number of students allowed to study abroad each term.
Yes	9	12%
No	69	88%
Total	78	100%

Comments:

- We have an enrollment limit on individual programs, but not a cap on the overall number of students going off campus.
- This is a large public university and is not so much of an issue here.
- Although only theoretically, because we never exercise the right to cap numbers. Based on budget.
- But the number of students studying abroad each year does catch the interest of the VP Finance. He would like to impose a cap. However, all of the other members of the President's staff and the president have said no.
- No formal cap, but students may be required to study abroad in their second-choice semester.
- Though caps are coming up in more and more meetings with the budget office sadly these days. :(
- Program caps vary per country and option.
- The cap can be exceeded if it is a one for one exchange.
- Our budget is tightly controlled by the central budget office. All students who seek to study abroad (except a small no. of Leaves of Absences) must apply through my office.
- An enrollment cap was imposed on EAP for several years, but now has been partly lifted.
- 150 students
- Individual programs have space limits but we advise students to select other programs that have space available.
- We have caps on program enrollments.
- The OIE is given a set sum of money for study abroad and this sum defines the number that can actually go.
